Summary	Auberge Homachi Mikuniminato is a dispersed-style accommodation located in Mikuni, Sakai City, Fukui Prefecture. The property consists of 9 renovated traditional houses with 16 guest rooms, along with one building housing a restaurant. Its design draws inspiration from Japan's traditional architecture, including the "Kagura-style machiya" (townhouses). Mikuni Port flourished from the Edo to Meiji periods as a hub for the Kitamaebune trading ships. The hotel's name comes from the term "homachi" (waiting for the sail), which referred to the period when sailors waited for favorable winds and calm seas. During this time, they sold goods or took on other work. As the times changed, the term "Homachi" came to refer to children's gifts and rewards. We hope that our customers' stay at Homachi feels like a reward and a break from their busy lives.
